Implementing Occupational Safety and Health Standards Globally

The Economic Crisis and Safety and Health at Work Welcome to the International ILO Safety and Health Conference, Düsseldorf, Germany, 3-6 November 2009

The global financial crisis will, without a doubt, have a profound effect on the world of work. The resulting changes will have a significant impact on safety and health in workplaces around the globe. Organizations are cutting costs, outsourcing, subcontracting, and increasing part-time work, with possible cuts in occupational safety and health budgets and public spending. The contraction in resources is likely to lead to more workplace accidents, diseases, fatalities and ill-health from unemployment, severely affecting social security expenditures and productivity. Thus, it is now more important than ever to strengthen tripartite efforts behind promoting safety and health at work and ensuring the proper implementation of occupational safety and health standards.

In collaboration with other organizations, the International Labour Organization will hold its biennial International Conference on "Implementing Occupational Safety and Health Standards Globally" during the A+A Messe Düsseldorf International Trade Fair and Congress 2009. The conference will focus on implementing standards and the role of social partners, labour inspection, non-state actors, social security and practitioners. Key themes are: The economic crisis and safety and health at work; health and life at work as a basic human right; the European Forum on the Seoul Declaration on Safety and Health at Work; good practices on prevention and OSH management; and labour inspection in the path of change. A round table discussion will conclude the conference with international representation from governments, worker and employer organizations as well as social partners who will come together to discuss the main issues raised during the conference sessions.

Statements from the co-organizers

Our special thanks go to the co-organizers and main partners of this conference.

Federal Ministry of Labour and Social Affairs Germany, International Association of Labour Inspection (IALI), International Social Security Association (ISSA), TÜV SÜD AG, Fraport AG, German Social Accident Insurance (DGUV).

We would also like to thank our other partners for their important contributions. BAD GmbH, E.ON AG, The Association for Social Security Policy and Research (GVG), European Agency for Safety and Health at Work, International Commission on Occupational Health (ICOH), Mplus, World Health Organization (WHO).

Lastly we would like to thank the following organizations for their long term commitment to providing a platform for improving the implementation of occupational safety and health: Messe Düsseldorf, German Federal Association for Occupational Safety and Health (Basi) e.V. Germany

It is through partnerships and proper implementation of occupational safety and health standards that we can ensure the well being of workers around the world. We are confident that we can come together to continue working for social justice in the pursuit of Decent Work for everyone. Even in a time of crisis, we can tolerate no compromise on the right to safe and healthy work.

Assane Diop
Executive Director
Social Protection Sector
International Labour
Office (ILO), Geneva

Federal Ministry of Labour and Social Affairs

An integral part of decent work is our responsibility to strengthen occupational safety and health. Good working conditions are a key objective of well-balanced and people-focused social and labour policies.

To achieve them we need a renewal of our social partnership, both across the country and in companies. To do this we are launching a campaign in Germany for a New Work Culture. Along with this campaign we are improving our strategic approach undertaken under the Joint German Occupational Safety and Health Strategy (GDA), which unites federal and countries authorities, and occupational accident insurance funds. All these parties are realigning prevention efforts to respond to the needs of trouble spots in occupational safety and health.

But we all know that in a globalized world labour markets do not end at national borders and working conditions are influenced by global production chains and service networks. We need bridges between national and international strategies if we want to improve safety and health in the workplace as a core element of sustainable development and creating new higher-quality work. The International ILO Safety Conference 2009 on Implementing Occupational Safety and Health Standards Globally will provide us and our social partners, and many other important players, with an excellent opportunity to build the bridges that will help us progress towards a better future in the world of work.

Olaf Scholz
Federal Minister for Labour
and Social Affairs, Berlin, Germany

IALI

Labour standards are essential to the social and economic wellbeing of every country. But without robust systems to inform, educate, promote and enforce these standards, they will not be effective.

Good governance over the implementation of standards for decent working conditions and for safety and health in particular, is vital. Effective labour inspection provides the means by which each country can have confidence that these standards are being implemented successfully. As the main partner of the ILO in the area of implementing labour standards, IALI is dedicated to working with the ILO and partners to strengthen labour inspection through the development of alliances, professionalism, integrity and influence, to make safe, healthy and decent work a reality worldwide. This conference provides an ideal opportunity to further this aim.

Michele Patterson

President of the International Association of Labour Inspection (IALI) and Executive Director, SafeWork SA, Department of the Premier and Cabinet, South Australia

ISSA

The conference provides an excellent opportunity to discuss strategies and measures to better protect workers health through strengthening national preventative cultures worldwide, and to thereby promote the implementation of the objectives of the Seoul declaration.

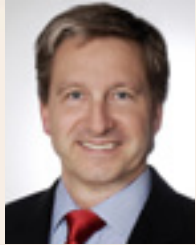

Hans-Horst Konkolewsky

Secretary General, International Social Security Association (ISSA), Geneva, Switzerland

Statements from the co-organizers

TÜV SÜD

As an international leader in technology and systems safety, we are convinced that ILO is crucial for achieving optimum occupational safety and health standards worldwide. Hence we are pleased to be a partner in this year's ILO International Safety Conference during the A+A.

Axel Stepken

CEO and President TÜV SÜD AG, Munich, Germany

Deutsche Gesetzliche Unfallversicherung

The ILO conferences during the A+A in Düsseldorf have always marked important steps towards better safety and health standards. Building on the previous success of these events, DGUV is strongly committed to health and safety at work and therefore fully supports the work of ILO and ISSA, as well as this conference.

Dr. Walter Eichendorf

Deputy Director General, DGUV, Sankt-Augustin, Germany

Fraport AG

As the central hub for international air traffic, Frankfurt airport acts as the interface between regional and international transport and logistics processes, covering almost all available carriers. As a core player in a global logistics system, Fraport AG, the operator of the largest airport in Germany, sees the transport of for example hazardous substances and goods as a responsibility not only of the company itself but also for all other participants along the whole logistics value chain. In addition to taking technical progress in the industry into account, this also entails equal consideration of the human factor. We can only secure long term success as a company by providing decent working conditions. Our excellent relations with the International Labour Organisation (ILO) and other important bodies in the area of occupational safety and health provide for essential transfer of knowledge – the basis for an integrated approach.

Herbert Mai

Member of the Executive Board of Fraport AG and Executive Director, Labour Relations, Germany

Basi

Messe Düsseldorf and Basi feel strongly committed to continuing co-operation with the ILO in order to systematically promote the internationalisation of the A+A. In our opinion, institutions, organisations and companies must endorse the principles of the world organisation and strive to support it within their means.

Bruno Zwingmann

Managing Director Düsseldorf, Germany

Messe Düsseldorf

The A+A is a unique place to bring together the global market players of Occupational Safety and Health with Labour Inspection, Social Partners, Social Security, and Practitioners. We look forward to around 55,000 trade show visitor, visitors from over 60 countries, and an approximately 6,000 experts attending the entire A+A Kongress.

Birgit Horn

Project Director A+A Düsseldorf, Germany

Conference Themes

International Labour Standards

The ILO develops international labour standards, including standards in the field of occupational safety and health, to help protect you at work. These standards exist to guide governments in setting national laws and regulations and enforcing their application at the workplace. If a country ratifies an ILO Convention, it has to incorporate its provisions into national law and practice. This means that employers and workers and their organizations also have the framework to improve working conditions and occupational safety and health. This is why ILO standards are promoted worldwide to ensure safe and healthy working environments.

How can we sit back when every 15 seconds a worker dies from a work-related accident or disease and every 15 seconds, 160 workers have a work-related accident. By the end of one day of our conference 1 million workers will have suffered a workplace accident. Around 5,500 workers will have died due to an accident or disease from their work! When cutting costs, why does safety and health have to go first? Only a safe and healthy workforce can be more productive. Health and safety at work today is a basic human right more than ever.

The Economic Crisis and Safety and Health at Work (Opening Session)

As safety and health at work is an essential part of labour relations, it is affected by the same forces of change that prevail in the national and global socioeconomic context.

All the trends in a changing world and workforce are expected to continue and be aggravated by the crisis. The potential impact leads to negative working conditions, poor safety and health and an increase in accidents, diseases and fatalities for millions of women and men and the most vulnerable groups like migrants and informal workers. Especially in times of crises it is necessary to strike out a new path: To develop OSH as a core element of sustainable corporate action and a new quality of work.

Health and Life at Work: A Basic Human Right (Session 1)

The Universal Declaration of Human Rights states that "everyone has the right to life, to work... and to just and favourable conditions of work..." This is something that cannot be compromised, especially during a time of crisis. It is important that action is taken to protect OSH now, before the effects of the crisis are felt to their fullest extent. The session will focus on developing strategies for the promotion of safety, health and life at work.

European Forum on the Seoul Declaration on Safety and Health at Work (Session 2)

The Seoul Declaration on Safety and Health at Work dictates that promoting OSH is the responsibility of society as a whole. The Declaration stresses that OSH requires the development of a safety culture in order to be truly effective and that OSH policies must be developed in alignment with this philosophy. This session will focus on forming partnerships and working together in order to develop and promote national prevention strategies and cultures.

Good Practices on OSH Management (Session 3)

Managing in the field of safety and health at work can be as complicated or as simple as you make it. At the national and the enterprise level many actors are involved. Experiences at the national and enterprise level will demonstrate the benefits of an OSH management system across geographical areas and regions. Key steps towards a powerful and successful implementation and a paradigm change to a new enterprise OSH culture and sustainability will be pointed out. National and enterprise level cases will provide information about a coherent and effective national system for safety and health management.

Good Practices on Prevention (Session 4)

Prevention is crucial in ensuring decent work for workers everywhere. Without creating a preventive OSH culture there can be little link between OSH legislation and guidelines and actual workplaces. These approaches must be present at national, enterprise, social partner, branch and inspection levels. This session will share good practices from around the globe to demonstrate prevention implementation at all levels so as to provide a comprehensive strategy for creating safer and healthier workplaces.

Labour Inspection in the Path of Change (Session 5)

The global economic crisis has changed the character and needs of workplaces around the world. Thus, labour inspection itself must adjust to respond to these changes. In a time of crisis the role of labour inspection must now focus on fostering social peace and creating the greatest chances for economic development. The state of the art of labour inspection around the world and IAL's new Code of Integrity will be presented. This session will focus on the new role of labour inspection, past national and international experiences and how inspection can best fulfil its mandate during the crisis.

Threat or Opportunity for OSH in Times of Crisis (Round Table Discussion)

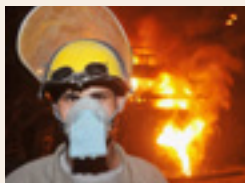

How can the ILO and its partners help to claim the right to a safe and healthy workplace even in times of global financial crisis? How can we prevent even one workplace accident from taking place every day, or avoid one death at the workplace? The round table discussion will raise this question for each one of us who is responsible for every worker's life: As employers and managers, it is our fundamental duty to provide a safe and healthy workplace. As workers, it is our fundamental right to work under safe and healthy conditions, to participate in implementing preventive measures and to know our rights. As governments, we are responsible for providing the infrastructure – the laws and services, the development of a national policy and program and an effective labour inspection system to enforce compliance with occupational safety and health legislation and policy. As academics, we are responsible for getting the awareness message across. We will discuss with high level representatives the solutions for a safe and healthy workplace, a new OSH culture and OSH strategies, and an effective and efficient labour inspection system.

Tour – Federal Institute for Occupational Safety and Health

The Federal Institute for Occupational Safety and Health (BAuA) with head office in Dortmund was formed on 01.07.1996 as a public law institute without legal capacity. The BAuA is an authority within the portfolio of the Federal Ministry of Labour and Social Affairs.

As a pool of competence and a knowledge service provider in matters of safety and health at work, they offer advice and practical assistance to companies, government, the social partners and the general public. They research, analyse, inform, publish, co-ordinate, develop, train and advise to help bring about a humane world of work with safe, healthy and competitive workplaces. The tour of the institute will include a viewing of DASA, the German Occupational Safety and Health Exhibition. The DASA was opened in 1993 as part of the Federal Institute for Occupational Safety and Health, and the 13,000 m² exhibition area was completed in time for the World Exhibition „EXPO 2000“. The exhibition examines the changing world of work and how competitiveness, social compatibility and sustainability fit into the equation of occupational safety and health. The German Occupational Safety and Health Exhibition (DASA) is a place to visit for an educational experience. Information can be found here about the world of work and its importance in society.

Tour – The New Build Hard Cool Fired Power Plant of E.ON

E.ON Kraftwerke focuses on a well-balanced energy mix and also continues to use the option of gas and hard coal consumption. One focal point is that of innovations in large-scale power plant technology – hard coal fired power plants with a high level of efficiency for the next generation. The new Datteln 4 power plant is included amongst these. A large-scale project, like the new construction of a power plant, brings with it an extensive amount of authorization and planning procedures including Health, Safety & Environment (HSE).

More information can be found at:

www.kraftwerk-datteln.com/pages/ekw_de/Neubau/Uebersicht/index.htm

Participants of the study tour will learn about the new build project of a power plant and existing safety management processes and measures. E.ON considers HSE as core value of our daily business. „Zero Incidents!“ is our goal. The bus will pick up the participants on the CCD South. After the Safety instructions on the construction site will be an imbiß, an information about the new plant and the safety and health criteria as well as a bus tour on the construction site and a special view over the construction site.

IALI-ILO Workshop

Decent Work Country Programmes

Decent Work Country Programmes (DWCPs) have been established as the main vehicle for delivery of ILO support and assistance to member States. DWCPs have two basic objectives: They promote decent work as a key component of national development strategies; and they make available ILO knowledge, instruments, expertise, advocacy and cooperation and put them at the service of the Organization's tripartite constituents in a results-based framework to advance the Decent Work Agenda within the fields where the ILO has a clear comparative advantage. Thus, tripartism and social dialogue are central to the design and implementation of a coherent and integrated ILO programme of assistance to constituents in member States, emphasizing also the ratification and implementation of International Labour Standards (ILS).

Effective implementation even only of the 10 „Core“ human rights – focused ILS at national levels requires not only good DW policies, but also effective monitoring and supervision mechanisms to ensure full compliance with the body of national labour legislation that gives effect to them. That is why the International Association for Labour Inspection, IALI, has a fundamental interest in cooperating closely with the ILO – and vice versa – to promote better labour inspection worldwide: through policies, institutions, and practice, for better implementation of DWCPs priorities and programmes, reflecting the strategic framework of the ILO, adapted to national situations and priorities. Strengthening labour inspection systems and services worldwide, and sharing best-practice experience: the declared aim of IALI, thus also directly helps ILO and its member States to fully realize their common global objectives.
