On behalf of the Ministry and in cooperation with the International Labour Organization and the International Social Security Association, it gives me immense pleasure to invite you all to the XIX World Congress to be held from September 11 to 15, 2011 in Istanbul which is the capital of culture for 2010 and the cradle of civilizations for centuries.

Within this framework, the World Congress aims at contributing to ensure the sharing of knowledge and good practices in the field of occupational safety and health among developing countries, countries with economies in transition and developed countries.

Once more it will be emphasized through the World Congress that occupational safety and health is also of utmost importance for both employees and society due to the process of economic change faced by the world in recent years.

INVITATION

XIX World Congress on Safety and Health at Work

September 11-15, 2011
Istanbul, Turkey

This XIX World Congress on Safety and Health at Work highlights the role of prevention as the keystone of effective strategies for a safe and healthy working environment and a sustainable future.

As the world strives to weather the storm of the financial and economic crises, the goal of safe and healthy workplaces must also be an integral element of plans for recovery that prevent a downward spiral in labour conditions and for sustainable development.

Occupational safety and health is first of all a matter of human rights and respect for human dignity - prevention strategies protect working women and men. For enterprises, societies and economies, productivity gains and reduced health care costs and demands on national social security systems are among the benefits to be had. Safe and healthy workplaces also go hand in hand with a cleaner environment.

We hope that you will bring your knowledge, experience and good practices to this Congress so that together we can accelerate progress towards a truly global preventative safety and health culture. Senior professionals, employers, workers, legislators, government officials and all those committed to promoting occupational safety and health can draw on the experience of this Congress to give impetus to national action for improved OSH systems driven by the principle of prevention.

As we focus on promoting a global preventative safety and health culture, we cannot ignore the OSH challenges of the informal economy, the major source of work in many countries and where the majority of workers lack any form of social protection.

Decent work for all must also be safety and health at work for all.

We look forward to your participation.

INVITATION

XIX World Congress on Safety and Health at Work

September 11-15, 2011
Istanbul, Turkey

Building a preventative safety and health culture is the responsibility of society as a whole. It is based on the recognition of safety and health at work as a fundamental human right and on the firm belief that every person should be granted the possibility to provide an active contribution to society in a safe and healthy working environment.

However, although much progress has been achieved over the last decades, global safety and health conditions are far from satisfactory. Traditional as well as new risks, informal employment, migration and most recently the impact of the global financial and economic crisis have led to increased vulnerability of working populations across the globe.

As a result, millions of workers and their families are suffering from the consequences of occupational accidents and diseases. Besides an immense human toll, poor working conditions also lead to huge financial costs with a negative impact on the development of both the economy and society as a whole. It is therefore evident that we must redouble our prevention efforts and seek new ways to ensure safe, healthy and productive working environments for all.

The Seoul Declaration adopted by the first ever Safety and Health Summit during the last World Congress in the Republic of Korea, represents one of the most significant new approaches as it affirms that all actors in society must be mobilized and can contribute to the development of a genuine workplace prevention culture. The value of this historic Declaration has been demonstrated by the support that has since been expressed by numerous international and regional safety and health organizations as well as national institutions, social partners, NGO's and individual enterprises.

The ISSA is therefore particularly pleased that the XIX World Congress on Safety and Health at Work "Building a Culture of Prevention for a Safe and Healthy Future", ensures continuity and further progress in the development of this promising approach. The World Congress represents the most important global forum for safety and health experts and policy-makers alike. Your participation and contribution are crucial, as only through international exchange and knowledge-sharing, through partnerships and innovation, and through a joint vision and commitment we can build and sustain a global prevention culture as the basis for a safe and healthy future.

Date: September 14, 2011

Venue: Sütlüce-1 Hall

A number of effective workplace interventions and good practice approaches exist to address specific hazards in the workplace, but too often their implementation produces mostly short-lived successes due to their limited target area. What is lacking is practical global, regional and country guidance on the best integrated or comprehensive manner to address workplace risks, including principles of occupational health and safety, traditional health promotion and lifestyles, the psychosocial working environment and corporate community action coupled with capacity building and sustainable human and economic development.

In particular, in times of financial uncertainty, there is an urgent need to produce such guidance for businesses to provide opportunities to sustain a healthy workforce and a healthy business and enhance commitment from employers to workers, and workers to businesses to obtain success in all spheres.

This workshop will present the WHO Healthy Workplace Model and a number of case studies demonstrating good practices. Further input by participants will be much appreciated.

Organizers: International Section of the ISSA on Machine and System Safety

Subject: Safety and Health Prevention in Small and Medium Enterprises (SMEs) of the Hospitality and Tourism Sector

Date: September 15, 2011 09:00 a.m - 12:30 a.m

Venue: Hasköy Hall

The applicability of general concepts and procedures for safety and health prevention to small and medium enterprises (SMEs) in the hospitality and tourism sector appears to be very limited. While a few best practice examples do exist, pertinent knowledge differs across countries. Accordingly, the overall goal of this workshop is to provide an overview of the concepts and approaches to (a) reach the SMEs in the hospitality and tourism sector (e.g., hotels, restaurants) in different countries, and (b) provide an overview of prevention methods and procedures deemed appropriate and/or efficient in different regions. Given this overall goal, the workshop will encompass three parts: In part one, Peter Barenz will provide a brief overview of the 'state of the art' on what appears to work when focused on the SMEs in the hospitality and tourism sector. In part two, best practice examples submitted by workshop participants from different countries/ regions will be presented and discussed. Contributions for best practice examples are very welcome until July 15, 2011, and can be submitted using the following link: <https://www.easychair.org/conferences/?conf...shsme2012=workshop>. In part three, Michael Bosnjak will discuss how Social Marketing principles may aid implementing and evaluating safety and health prevention programs in SMEs of the hospitality and tourism sector.

As for Dolmabahçe Palace, built in the 19th century, it is one of the most glamorous palaces in the world. It was the administrative centre of the Ottoman Empire. Later it was converted into a museum.

Ancient Peninsula Tour: Famous in particular for its massive dome in İstanbul, Hagia Sophia is a former Orthodox patriarchal basilica, later converted into a mosque and a museum later. From the date of its dedication in 360 until 1453, it served as the Cathedral of Constantinople, except between 1204 and 1261, when it became the Cathedral of the Latin Empire. The building was converted into a mosque from 29 May 1453 until 1934. Later, on 1 February 1935, it was opened as a museum. The Sultan Ahmed Mosque is also a spectacular historic architecture in İstanbul. Popularly known as the Blue Mosque because of the blue tiles decorating interior. It was built between 1609 and 1616, under the rule of Ahmed I. Like many other mosques, it also comprises a tomb of the founder, a madrasah and a hospice. Formally called Constantinople, Istanbul was the capital of the Roman Empire and Europe's wealthiest metropolis, and is now the largest city in Turkey.

One of the most famous monuments in both the Turkish and Islamic worlds, the Sultan Ahmet Mosque (also known as the Blue Mosque) is a superb creation in the classical Ottoman style. The mosque has six towering minarets and 260 windows illuminating its vast main chamber, which is decorated with more than 20,000 Iznik tiles.

Hagia Sophia:

Now a museum, Hagia Sophia was built in the 6th century by Emperor Justinian, and was one of the largest basilicas in the Christian world. Probably the best way to describe the Grand Bazaar is to quote Mark Twain - "We went to the Grand Bazaar in Stamboul, of course, and I shall not describe it further than to say it is a monstrous hive of little shops - thousands, I should say - all under one roof, and cut up into innumerable little blocks by narrow streets which are arched overhead."

With more than 4000 shops on 64 streets, the Grand Bazaar (Kapalıçarşı in Turkish), looks like a labyrinth. This is a walk that will lead you through shops where leather goods are sold, sweets, dried fruit and spices, jewelry, glassware, pottery, fabrics, belly dancing costumes, t-shirts and all sorts of souvenirs. Let us guide you through the most authentic district of our city.

- Time : 09:30
- English Guidance
- Fee: 50 $

GALLIPOLI AND TROY TOUR

Troy, scene of Homer's Iliad, the story of the Trojan War and the first great work of Western literature. Here Achilles, Hector and Agamemnon performed their heroic exploits in their attempts to recapture Helen, whose beauty launched 1,000 ships. Today, Troy was the theme of a major Hollywood production, starring Brad Pitt and Orlando Bloom. The site dates back to the very early Bronze Age (2500 BC) and was discovered by the German archeologist Heinrich Schliemann in late 19th century. The city was destroyed and rebuilt many times, with the result that the site consists of many layers, one city atop the other. To the layman, perhaps the most impressive feature is the massive ramparts.

Gallipoli peninsula. This was the scene of the world's first modern amphibious landing, planned by Winston Churchill, and one of Turkey's greatest military victories of modern times, but it was won at the cost of enormous losses on both sides, particularly among the heroic Anzac troops.
